Introduction to the Federal Camping Data Standard

1.1 Objective of the Standard

Camping, whether in a more developed area or in a wilderness-type setting, is recognized by the public and governmental agencies as a public resource. To enhance the camping experience for the public, it is important to standardize campground data among federal agencies that manage campsites and campgrounds, including the National Park Service (NPS), the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), the Bureau of Reclamation (BOR), the United States Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS), the United States Forest Service (USFS), and the United States Army Corps of Engineers (USACE).

A Federal Camping Data Standard (FCDS) will enable national, regional, state, and campground-level managers and the public to use mutually understood terminology for recording, retrieving, and applying spatial and tabular information.

A data standard will make it easier for campground information to be accessed, exchanged, and used by more than one individual, agency, or group.

Ease in sharing data increases the capability for enhanced and consistent mapping, inventory, monitoring, condition assessment, maintenance, costing, budgeting, information retrieval, and summary reporting for most internal and external needs.

For many federal and state land management agencies, campground organizations, and businesses, the collection, storage, and management of campground-related data are important components of operations and site management activities. Campground data often is related to other types of infrastructure, resource, and facility enterprise data.

For the public, data enables users to more consistently and predictably obtain specific campground and corresponding information.

Today, digital campground data are a necessity for a variety of campground management needs, including planning for design, construction, operation, and maintenance.

Implementing a widely accepted standard, in addition to automating, sharing, and leveraging camping data, can provide a variety of important benefits for the land manager and the public. These include improved:

- Consistency. Standardized data allows for the alignment of campground-related data across agencies, organizations, and entities, and provides for the sharing of consistent information;
- Efficiency. Standardized data improves efficiency in data collection and sharing, minimizing data calls and resource absorption by allowing for data that is more readily available;
- Compatibility. Standardized data becomes more compatible across projects, disciplines, and other applications;
- Speed. Greater availability of data can enable efforts to progress more quickly, reduce duplication, and lower production costs;
- Conflict resolution. Conflicting campground data can be more easily resolved through compliance to data standards;
- Reliability. The quality of shared campground data is enhanced by increasing the number of individuals who find and correct errors; and
- Reusability. Standardized data allows for maximum reuse across agencies and supports objectives of EGovernment (E-Gov) initiatives and enterprise architecture.

1.2 Scope of the Standard

The functional scope of the FCDS includes a core set of campground data attributes, corresponding values, and definitions. This standard reflects campground data applicable only to campgrounds within the United States, including all U.S. territories and outlying possessions.

The standard is limited to developed (also known as “front country”) campgrounds that facilitate overnight stays on designated sites. It does not address:

- Camping that is managed through permits (also known as “back country,” “wilderness,” or “dispersed” camping).
- Day-use-only facilities (e.g. picnic facilities); or
- Ticket and tour facilities

In the future, this standard may be revised and extended to encompass these inventory types.

This standard also does not define in detail any campground element that already has its own dedicated data standard. For example:

- Trails (see “Federal Trail Data Standards” November 2011)
- Accessibility (see “A Summary of Accessibility Standards for Federal Outdoor Developed Areas” May 2014)

1.3 Applicability

Campground data are used for many purposes including planning and management, mapping and condition assessment, public information, emergency response, and research. This Federal Camping Data Standard is applicable to developed campgrounds of all kinds, including tent, RV/camper, water-based, and built-structure facilities. It does not cover all possible campground data or agency-specific data needs but rather concentrates on a core set of interagency management and administrative campground data needs, identified through an interagency and core team effort.

In developing this standard, the core team focused on meeting the needs of two core user groups: visitors and managers. This team also considered secondary users of camping data, such as policymakers, data aggregators, and commercial entities. For more information, see section 2.3.2, below.

1.4 Contributors and Core Team Composition

Development of this standard has been a joint effort across multiple organizations. Contributors include:

- Bureau of Land Management (BLM)
- Bureau of Reclamation (BOR)
- National Park Service (NPS)
- United States Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS)
- United States Forest Service (USFS)
- United States Army Corps of Engineers (USACE)
- Recreation.gov (R1S)

1.5 Related Standards

Until now, there have been limited attempts to create universal standards within the United States for campground terminology and data attributes. However, interagency management and customer experience feedback suggest the need for such a standard.

In developing this standard, the FCDS core team referenced:

- US Forest Service Handbook, “Chapter 10: Planning and Design of Developed Recreation Sites and Facilities” (January 25, 2018)
- Bureau of Land Management, Camping Data Standard
- United States Access Board, “A Summary of Accessibility Standards for Federal Outdoor Developed Areas” (May 2014)
- Federal Geographic Data Committee, “Federal Trail Data Standards” (November 2011)
- Recreation Activities and Definitions: A Suggested List for Federal Coordination on Terminology (December 2019)

1.6 Data Standard Governance

The purpose of this governance process is to ensure that all member agencies have the opportunity and a process to provide feedback to, and/or use, the Federal Camping Data Standard. To provide a stream-lined approach for gathering and discussing agency feedback and making updates to data standards, the following governance process will be implemented:

Inter-Agency Governance Team:

- R1S/Recreation.gov - Lead, scribe, and coordination
- Member Agencies - Two members per agency
  - Submitted to Governance Lead as part of consolidated feedback gathering notated below

First Year Plan:

- Frequency of Inter-Agency Governance Meetings:

- Quarterly for first year
- Gathering Agency Feedback
  - Each member agency will gather feedback per their internal processes and provide that feedback on a quarterly basis.
  - Each member agency will also assign two representatives from their agency to the governance panel to consolidate their feedback.
  - The Governance Lead will request consolidated feedback from the agencies no less than four weeks prior to each quarterly meeting.
  - Governance Lead will schedule the inter-agency governance meeting and send an update with the consolidated feedback in an attachment to the calendar invite.
- Meeting to Discuss Agency Feedback
  - The Governance lead will send consolidated feedback to the inter-agency governance members at least one week prior to the meeting.
  - The Governance lead will host the meeting and ensure all discussions/decisions are notated and distributed for any clarifications needed within two weeks of end of governance meeting.
- Publishing updates to the Federal Camping Data Standard
  - The Federal Camping Data Standard will be updated annually and distributed to the member agencies for final feedback prior to publishing.

2nd Year and Beyond:

- Frequency of Inter-Agency Governance Meetings:
  - Annually
- Gathering Agency Feedback
  - Each member agency will gather feedback per their internal processes and provide that feedback on each year.
  - Each member agency will assign two representatives to the governance panel and provide their consolidated feedback.
  - The Governance lead will request consolidated feedback from the agencies no less than four weeks prior to the annual meetings.
  - The Governance lead will schedule the inter-agency governance meeting and send an update with the consolidated feedback in an attachment to the calendar invite.
- Meeting to discuss Agency Feedback
  - The Governance lead will send the consolidated feedback to the inter-agency governance members at least one week prior to the annual meeting.
  - The Governance lead will host the meeting and ensure all discussions/decisions are notated and distributed for any clarification needed within two weeks of the end of the governance meeting.

- Publishing updates to the Federal Camping Data Standard
  - The Federal Camping Data Standard will be updated annually and will be distributed to the member-agencies for final feedback prior to publishing.

2 Rationale for the Design

2.1 Key Points

The Federal Camping Data Standard (FCDS):

- Identifies a common set of standardized terminology that can be consistently applied to a core set of campground information.
- Is not a database and will not be the repository of all camping data or source for future reports.
- Can be incorporated into existing databases and/or used to crosswalk existing agency data to enable combining or sharing information at a Federal/multi-jurisdictional level.
- Contributes to the Federal Government's ongoing pursuit of improving efficiency by developing and implementing data standards across agencies. See section 2.2. below.

2.2 Legal Underpinnings of the Camping Data Standards Project

The following mandates and directives recognize the need for the development of data standards.

- The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (P. L. 104-13)
- The Government Performance and Results Act of 1993 (GPRA) (P. L. 103-62)
- The Presidential E-Government Initiatives (including Recreation One Stop)
- The President's Management Agenda, March 2018

2.3 Defining Campground-Related Terminology

Before attempting to identify and apply Federal Camping Data Standards, it is essential to have a clear definition of certain terms that will be used to define the activity of camping, as well as sites or areas used for camping purposes.

- Camping: The act of staying and sleeping in an outside area for one or more days and nights.
- Campground: An area that is developed for camping and contains one or more campsites.
- Campsite: A specific area within a campground that provides for camping use and often includes a camp living area, a parking spur, and one or more constructed features, such as a picnic table and a cooking or campfire area.

- Outdoor Recreation Access Route (ORAR): A continuous, unobstructed path designed for pedestrian use that connects constructed features in a campground, camping unit, picnic area, at a trailhead or other recreation site where modifications are provided for visitor convenience and comfort.

2.3.1 Sites and Facilities

Within each developed (i.e., front-country) campground, a variety of campsite options may be offered. Within the identified scope, below is a categorization of camping-related site options along with examples and definitions to demonstrate potential data applicability. Campground attributes related to this data are defined in Section 3.

| Campsite Option | Definition                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Examples                                  | Definition                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Tent Site       | A designated space that will accommodate a soft-sided shelter, usually a tent. (The tent is provided by the visitor; it is not maintained by the facility owner.)                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Small tent                                | A tent that is equal to or less than 12 feet x 12 feet.                                                                                                                                                 |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Large tent                                | A tent that is greater than 12 feet x 12 feet.                                                                                                                                                          |
| RV Site         | A campsite that will accommodate a recreational vehicle that may or may not have water, sewer, or electrical hookups. The site may have additional space for a tent. (This vehicle is provided by the visitor; it is not maintained by the facility. However, water, sewer, and electric hookups do require maintenance, as do the roads that accommodate these vehicles.) | Motorized RVs                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Class A Motorhome                         | A recreational vehicle that resembles a bus, roughly 30-40 feet in length. May have multiple slideouts for added space and often includes residential style appliances.                                 |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Class C Motorhome                         | A recreational vehicle built on a truck chassis, offering similar amenities to a Class A, just on a smaller scale (21-41 feet).                                                                         |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Class B Motorhome (or other small camper) | A recreational vehicle built on a van chassis, roughly 20-25 feet in length. This category also includes self-contained vans, pickup trucks and other vehicles that people have converted for sleeping. |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Towable RVs                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Fifth Wheel Camper                        | A towable RV, typically pulled by large pick-up trucks with a special fifth-wheel hitch located in the bed of the truck. May include slideouts.                                                         |
|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Travel Trailer/ Camping Trailer           | An RV towed by a vehicle which provides a place to sleep and eat. Some may have separate rooms, furniture, and slideouts for additional space.                                                          |

It usually only has sleeping space for two adults and often has a basic kitchen in the rear. Many teardrop manufacturers are designing “off-grid” units which are self contained (power, heating, large cap. H2O storage). |
|                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Pop-Up Camper                  | A towable RV that has a hard base with fabric or hard sides that extend vertically (or “pop up”) to provide living and sleeping space.                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Built Lodging Structure | A place where a person or group is lodged overnight, inside a structure with a floor, walls, and a roof. The floor may be finished or natural. (This structure is maintained by the facility.)                      | Cabin                          | A simple small dwelling usually having only one story.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Fire Tower/ Lookout            | A small room, known as a cab, located atop a large steel, or wooden tower, usually located on the summit of a mountain or other high vantage point.                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
|                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Shelter/ Lean-To               | A built structure with minimal furnishings, often with no walls, only a roof                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
|                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Yurt                           | A circular tent on a collapsible framework. While some yurts may use skins, most modern yurts are not felt or skin but a type of rubberized nylon or other modern material.                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Boat                    | A place where a person or group is lodged overnight inside a water-based vessel. (The boat is not maintained by the facility. However, the dock, buoy or marina that accommodates the boat do require maintenance.) | Slip                           | A boat slip is the portion of water next to a pier, main pier, finger pier, or float where a boat is berthed overnight.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
|                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Anchorage                      | A designated location where a boat may drop its anchor offshore.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Mooring                        | A designated location where a mooring line connects an anchor on the seafloor to a floating structure, to which a boat may tie up.                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

And each of these accommodations may have different methods of access, including:

| Access | Definition | Accommodations |
|--------|------------|----------------|

|-------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| Road-Based  | Primary access to the campsite is via automobile                                                                                                    | Tent, RV, Built Lodging Structure   |
| Trail-Based | Primary access to the site is via a trail or path. Different trails may enable access on foot, on horseback, on bicycle, or on an off-road vehicle. | Tent, Built Lodging Structure       |
| Water-Based | Primary access to the site is by a body of water via the use of a water traversing vessel such as a boat, canoe, or raft.                           | Boat, Tent, Built Lodging Structure |
| Air-Based   | Primary access to the site is by aircraft.                                                                                                          | Tent, Built Lodging Structure       |

All these camping options fall within the scope of this data standard. However, not every attribute is applicable to every type of campsite; the standard uses the preceding categorizations to demarcate potential applicability.

2.3.2 Who Will Use Camping Data?

The core team took a human-centered approach to identifying stakeholders and specific data needs for the development and application of the Federal Camping Data Standard.

Primary Stakeholders

Primary stakeholders are defined as visitors or direct users of campgrounds or those who are responsible for managing campgrounds. The table below provides examples of these stakeholders and a sample of their potential data needs.

Primary stakeholders include:

- Campground visitors of all kinds
  - Individuals
  - Families
  - Organized groups
  - Informal groups
  - Individuals and groups with accessibility requirements
- Managers and planners
  - On-site management
  - Regional managers
  - Superintendents
  - Recreation One Stop (R1S)

Secondary Stakeholders

Secondary stakeholders are individuals and entities whose interest in the camping data standard ranges from consumers (people who want to access camping data for various purposes), to partners (people who use but also help to improve camping data), to providers (people who may be able to provide data that can, in turn, be shared with others).

Secondary stakeholders include:

- Data aggregators (e.g. third-party mapping or application providers)
- Commercial entities (e.g., campground providers, concessionaires, guide companies, recreation equipment manufacturers)
- Policymakers (e.g. Congress, lobbyists)
- Researchers (e.g. universities, non-governmental organizations)
- Investigators (e.g. law enforcement, search and rescue)
- Media
- State, Regional, and Local Tourism Offices
- Utilities
- Recreational government
- Non-recreational government
- Non-commercial advocates

2.3.3 Factors Considered

Listed below are a few of the basic premises that were incorporated into development of the FCDS.

- Federal Core Data Set: Represents the minimum set of data that the agencies agree to provide for all agency-managed or administered campgrounds
- Data Collection and Management: Data is not cheap! Each piece of data that is collected and recorded represents a cost in terms of time, database capability, and available space. The subsequent and ongoing need to update certain data attributes represents an additional expense. The decision to collect, record, and manage specific data should always be done considering the benefits and value of the data versus the initial and future cost.
- Standardized Terminology: Strive to establish and/or use the same terminology among agencies for federal campground data standards. When this is not possible, provide crosswalk translation between the FCDS attribute terminology and definitions and those of the individual agency.
- Existing Data Attributes: If an identified FCDS attribute already exists as a standard attribute within one agency, but is not yet standardized and/or used by other agencies, consider adopting the attribute terminology and/or definition that is already in use to maximize efficiencies and minimize confusion or data re-work.
- Field Verification: To the extent possible, and when applicable, campground data should be based on field verification/inventory. Formal campground inventory and condition assessments should be performed, if they do not already exist.
- Implementation: The core standards will be implemented and data provided based on current agency priorities and budgets.

2.3.4 Selection Criteria

To identify the most common campground data needs, nine criteria were used to choose the data attributes that are in the Federal Camping Data Standards.

Does the data attribute:

1. Provide significant value to primary stakeholders?
2. Provide value to secondary stakeholders?
3. Directly relate to a FCDS Core Question? (See 2.3.5, below.)
4. Have national, regional or state-wide significance?
5. Contribute to the minimum data needed to provide a programmatic snapshot of the campground (i.e. inventory, public information)?
6. Include the minimum data needed to comply with and reflect applicable laws, regulations, and/or policies?
7. Address key Congressional, Office of Management and Budget (OMB), and department-wide reporting requirements?
8. (Is the Data Attribute...) Currently available or obtainable?
9. Include those attributes that would set national precedents or affect nation-wide campground management?

2.3.5 Core Questions

The following set of core questions, common to all participating agencies, all campground types, and reflecting the FCDS Selection Criteria, were identified to help narrow the scope and identify the Federal Campground Data Standard.

|                                     | Core Question                                                                                                                         | Optional or Required |
|-------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------|
| Basic Campground Information | What is the general description of the campground? (e.g. natural features, unique features, atmosphere)                               | Required             |
|                                     | What is the level of development of this campground?                                                                                  | Required             |
|                                     | Where is the campground? (e.g. physical address, county, congressional district)                                                      | Optional             |
|                                     | How do you get to the campground? (e.g. landmarks, directions)                                                                        | Required             |
|                                     | How do you contact the campground?                                                                                                    | Optional             |
|                                     | What are the season dates? (When is the campground open? When is it reservable, if at all?)                                           | Required             |
|                                     | What types of camping are supported?                                                                                                  | Required             |

3 Data Standard

3.1 Campground Descriptors

The FCDS uses three primary dimensions to describe a campground:

- Attribute: descriptor, which helps to define the intrinsic and relatively fixed qualities of the campground itself.
- Amenity: a desirable or useful feature of a facility. May or may not need to be maintained by the campground.
- Activity: an allowable recreational use within or near the campground.

The FCDS addresses the first two sets of descriptors: the attributes and amenities of campgrounds and campsites. Activities are defined in a separate standard, “Recreation Activities and Definitions: A Suggested List for Federal Coordination on Terminology (December 2019).”

3.2 Campground Attributes

*NOTE: Any values sent in as ‘Open String’ will not be accepted (not updated in database), but will be considered for future inclusion as an acceptable value.

The table below provides a summary of the FCDS campground attributes, which are the intrinsic and relatively fixed qualities of the campground. These attributes provide identifiable and useful information about the campground, for both primary and secondary stakeholders.

Shading indicates whether the item is required (green) or optional (yellow).

| Attribute Name     | Attribute Definition                                                                                                           | Format or Values | Character Limit                                  | Required or Optional |

3.3 Campground Amenities

*NOTE: Any values sent in as ‘Open String’ will not be accepted (not updated in database), but will be considered for future inclusion as an acceptable value.

The availability of certain amenities is often an important factor for campground visitors in choosing a destination and planning their visit.

The campground amenities table below categorizes a list of potential desired or useful features in a campground, along with an amenity definition and the related values and features.

The standard captures accurate and specific information about each amenity offered by a developed campground.

- Some campground amenities are available year-round, some are only seasonal, and some aren't available at all.
- Some amenities are offered on-site at the campground, and some are only available nearby.
- Furthermore, the amenities may or may not need to be maintained by the facility itself; some of the listed amenities may be managed by concessionaires or other campground partners. Identify whether the amenities are available, regardless of who is managing them.

The intent of the Descriptors column, below, is to capture characteristics like these for each amenity.
